POBILAND, SATURDAY IEB 6. 1886. A LOOM AT BOTH SIDES.

It is now thought probable that there will be no great debate in the senate on the questions trivived in the suspension of efficials by the president. The senate, it is supposed, will continue from time to time, as the names come up for confirmation, to ask the president for his "reasons." It is expected that he will answer us beretofore, deciming to give them. Then the senate will refuse to confirm the appointments. senate will refuse to confirm the appointments. Should this policy be pursued a large number of enale adjourne, three or four months hence. But all nominations made to fill vacancies caused by expiration of terms, resignation or death, will be promptly confirmed

The republicans of the senate say there will be no "ecrimmage" between the senate and the president, nevertheless they say they will not confirm nominations made to fill the places of officials removed under han of suspicion and discrece, when their real offence consists in reacons, ' they will confirm his nomineer Otherwise they will "hang the nominations up Some hundreds are in this condition now

A Washington dispatch to the New York Her-ald turnshies the republican argument. The president, republican senators openly and plainly say, came into office pledged in various letters and public utterances to make no removals merely for partisan reasons, but to relain faitiful minor officers in their places until the expiration of their four year terms, when naturally, as they say, he would replace them with democrats. If he had adhered faithfully to this rule, to which he was pound by his own atterances. these republican senators add, the inevitable resuit would have been that in about two years from the date of his accession he would have had the offices equally divided between the two parties, excluding, of course, those merely clar ical places which come under the civil service rule At the close of his four year term, par-suing the same course, he would have filled all the office with d-mocrats. At the end of two years, indeed, if the vacancies by death and designation are counted, he would have had 60 per cent, of the offices filled with demograts result of this gradual polici, the republican senators declare, would have been an important, sold, and entring step in return of the civil service. The spoils system would have got a fatal blow because no party managers could there after have promised a "clean sween " the uld have become fixed that houest and capal le officials in the minut and non infinisterial grades should serve out their four 142 terme, and as these terms fall in at different times for different officer, there could be no general turning out, nor could either party offer the buge tribs of "all the offices ' for its ' workers" in a presidential canvass.

They say further that the president, in vida-tion of his fightic congagements, has removed many republican officials expressly to make room for democrats. Under the spoils system this would not have excited remark, nor did sum mary removal then bring any reproach on a person turned out. It often happened, indeel, that an officer removed received at the sades tune the official assurance that he had per formed all his public duties in the most satisfac tory manner But with the public opinion fixed on a reform of the spoils system and the pres nt pledged to such reform the removal of an cer puts a stain on his character, and if he has been a faithful public servant he ought hiet to be under such suspicion and reproach Senators say that they have confirmed and will confirm all proper nominations made to fill vaccin-ties but, considering that the president stood committed to making no removals except for cause, they assert that he has, in every case of removal, by implication charged the person temoved with misconduct in office, and therefore they will not m such cases confirm the preji-dent's appointment. It is further urged thin the senate, having the constitutional duty of advising and consenting to the appointment of the g and comessing of these accused men, owes it to them to ascertain whether they are rightfully accused, whether they deserved removal or whether the president, moved by the pressure of his party supports s, had been led to

This is a strained argument. It has, indeed, basis of truth, in that it recalls the fact that the president committed him-elf to the doctage that no removal should be runde without good case, and that good cause outd not be found in the fact that some person of the opposite party wanted the place. Un loubtedly the president has it many instances failed to keep this pledge lau neither party expected him to keep it at all. It is, however, only truth to say that he appeared to have tried to keep it as far as incould, without losing entirely the support of the own party. The fact bathe bas not made a "cieffn sweep" has been of value to civil service. reform. Un the other hand, it will not be uni versally conceded that the republicans of the senate are netting with the unselfish purpose of divorcing the public service from partisansing and the spois system. It will appear rath r that they are making a play for partisan advan tage Republican senators have not been so clear of the spoils system as to make it practice the for them to convince the courty that the public good, through improvement of political methods and morals, is their sole purpose. Moreove the assertion, so much dwelt upon, that 'remeral of an offl or puts a stain on his character, is unfounded. In such mass the president spletige is not thought of for the ublicking week enough when an official is removed, whether it is done for a partisan reason?

Again, wa matter of politics the republican party caurot afford to raise a controversy over this subject for, by so doing, it will muste the democratic party and make it fight with an energy that it will evince on a other question or issue whatever Better let the democrate take the offices without a contest. In any event they will have all of them before the expiration of Mr. (leveland's term | Likewise, in any fight merely for the offi es the republicar party will be beaten and perhaps it ought to be, since it held a't the three for about a quarter of a cen tury, and i's office mongering adherents are about as far from being civil service reforme's

Indeed, sin investigation in this field of inquiry has emerged from the empirical state and become scientifically demonstrated truth. It has been several years since cartain scientists commenced investigating the nature and effects of alcoholics upon different organs of the body and the subject less been so thoroughly sitted that we feel as sure of the nature and effects of that substance as we would of any other pison which might be taken into the system. I should consider it very presumptuous to consider it the substance as we would not such men as Dr Seel. Dr. Richardson, Dr Palmer, and others whom we might mention.

To give you the effects of stimulants and narcetics upon each organ of the body would necessitate the writing of a lengthy article, and we do not feel willing to encroach so largely upon the space of This Obseronax without permission from its editor.

We would be pleaked to have this question.

Steel's "Hygienic Phys-By studying Dr. J. It 'Steel's "Hygienic Phys-tology for H.gh. Schools," you will obtain the information you desire information you desire gree better, in or opinion, morally, than the inderate drinker Welwell give you the reason for this conclusion. Morality relates to the practice, manners or conduct of mon as social beings in relation to such other, as regards right and wrong.

Alcohol is both a stimulant and narrotic. There are fay men as stone, physically, that each other, as regards right and wrong.

Alcobol is both a stimulant and narcotic. There are few men so strong, physically, that they can drink the potson, in what seems improduce the grant they can be seen an envery seldom feel the second effect of alcohol, while others, not so strong, will pass into the death-like slumber of drunkenness, soon after intibing half the quantity taken by the so-called moderate drinker. The moderate drinker, as you call him keeps has feet, and no effect aside from the excitant feature is perceptible. He occupies a high position socially, and by precept and example advocates the moderate use of alcoholics.

Hany who essay to follow this man a example are in a few years cast down from the highest plannels of position and hope and soon become bankrupt in every moral quality.

Now, Mr. Requires has the moderate drinker, who, through his influence and conduct, lures his fellow creatures to rain, done right or wrong in his social relations with them? You cannot say that his conduct was right, and if not right, is the moderate drinker equal, morally to the ebstairer, who would warn of danger, and in his social intercourse conduct himself in such a manner as to strengthen and encourage those, with whom he may associate, in leading sober upright live? The example of the moderate drinker, has been a snare to many, and any man professing to be such out, it or forcer as a manner as to strengthen and encourage those, with whom he may associate, in leading slober upright live. The example of the moderate drinker, has been a sance to many, and any mach as possible the man who atways experiences the narrotte effect of alcohol after dranking it.

A gain, it has been conceded that the children of those whe use alcohol are very apt to become incurable of inhards if they follow the example of the parent. This is also true of some families where the father claims to be a moderate drinker. They transpit this appatite to their off sprig Any parentshabeld wish to bequeath to this children sound healthy organisms. To do oth gravites is a sin, a wrong against which the moral degredation of the child is an eternal procest. The intellect, the power which chables us to comprehend, is variously distributed among the members of the human family. We would not presume to say that this grand gift has not been given to many who see fit to iry to play the role of moderate drinkers many having intellect do not use it in endeavoringlic discover their duty toward hear fellow which are two of the fathibutes of wisdom—which would enable them to see that their influence in this regard a mything out beneficial.

We are placed here to make this world a little father than we have lived. Does the man or youan who entice to drunkenness do this? How few of those who essay to play the part of nodernet drinkers succeed in doing so! Of the large muniser of persons who help support the liquor traffic but few reach the agn of 60, but many, very many reach a frunkard a grave in pouth or early manlo od, who beer dreamed of meeting such a fate when they commenced the downward course by drinking from the sectial glass.
